The union rejected the district's proposal to increase workers' pay at the beginning of this school year and said it was unlikely to agree to any change in the school system's health insurance program, which was awarded this year to a new management company. Union leaders said the district was "going back on our commitments." Mr. D'Elia, who negotiated the contract with the union, said his administration had tried to make changes before, but that union leaders had resisted. In the past, the district has offered to pay more overtime for nurses and social workers, he said. The union has fought those offers, arguing that the money would go to union members instead of, say, school cafeteria workers, who may never see more than $12 an hour, he said. The union is also resisting the district's plan to extend the school day by 20 minutes. A preliminary contract extension would give employees more hours but not necessarily more money, though the district says the added time would equate to an extra $100 a month in pay. The district was also offering to freeze the wages of newly hired clerical workers at $

I was thinking whether it is possible to calculate the value of $\sum_{m=1}^n \ln(m)$ and I found that $\sum_{m=1}^n \ln(m) = \frac{n^2 - n}{2}$. Is that true or it's just a coincidence that it equals to the right part of the value? It's also possible that it's not possible to calculate the value of $\sum_{m=1}^n \ln(m)$.

Can someone confirm it for me? A: It is true that $\log n + 2(\log$
